FRI

2. Old cloaths; cast dresses; tattered rags.
Poor poet ape, that would be thought our chief,
Whose works are e'en the frippery of wit;
From brocade is become so bold a thief,
As we, the robb'd, leave rage, and pity it. Ben. Johnson.
The fighting-place now seameans rage supply,
And all the tackling is a frippery. Donne.
Ragfair is a place near the Tower of London, where old cloaths and frippery are sold. Notes to Pope's Dunciad.
- TO FRISK. v. n. [from frizzare, Italian.] 1. To leap; to skip.
Put water into a glass, and wet your finger, and draw it round about the lip of the glass, pressing it somewhat hard; and after drawing it some few times about, it will make the water frisk and sprinkle up in a fine dew. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
The fish fell a frisking in the net. LeStrange's Fables.
Whether every one hath experimented this troublesome intrusion of some frisking ideas, which thus importune the understanding, and hinder it from being better employed, I know not. Locke.
2. To dance in frolic or gaiety.
We are as twinn'd lamb, that did frisk i' th' sun,
And bleat the one at the other: what we chang'd,
Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.
About them frisking play'd
All beasts of th' earth. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. iv.
A wanton heifer frisked up and down in a meadow, at ease and pleasure. LeStrange.

Sly hunters thus, in Borneo's isle,
To catch a monkey by a wife,
The mimic animal amuse;
They place before him gloves and shoes;
Which when the brute puts awkward on,
All his agility is gone:
In vain to frisk or climb he tries;
The huntmen seize the grinning prize: Swift.
- FRISK. n. f. [from the verb.] A frolic; a fit of wanton gaiety.
FRISKER. n. f. [from frisk.] A wanton; one not constant or settled.
Now I will wear this, and now I will wear that;
Now I will wear I cannot tell what:
All new fashions be pleasant to me:
Now I am a frisker, all men on me look;
What should I do but let cock on the hoop? Camden.
